this scheme, that we should not object to the annexation of the whole of Virginia to West Virginia. We must say, however, that the scheme is original in this, that whereas heretolore people every-where and always have desired that, if possible, a frontage on salt water should be possessed by the State, the Valley would, crab like, travel backwards and away from the sea in joining herself to West Virginia. She would right-about face, and instead of looking to the east, would go toward the setting sun and sway from the broad bosom of the ocean, which bears the commerce of all the world. It hink that the testimony proves the corrupt offer by Pomeroy to Senator Simpson, of the Kansas Legislature, to obtain the vote of the latter. I also believe that the testimony convicts Pomeroy of having attempted to bribe Senator York, of that Legislature, to vote for him that Pomeroy delivered money to York is 300. WASHINGTON, March 3.—The commit-tee appointed to investigate the charges of bribery in the recent Senatorial elec-tion in Kansas, preferred against Senator Pomeroy by A. M. York and B. F. Simp-son, made their report this afternoon through the chairman, Senator Frelling-huysen. The report first calls attention to the charges of Simpson and after Pomeroy delivered money to York is not denied. The only material issue between to the charges of Simpson, and after quoting the testimony or several witnesses says: "A majority of the committee are of opinion that none of the charges pre-ferred by Simpson, consisting of a num-ber of alleged specific acts of bribery or attempts to bribe, have been sustained." are contradictory, are inconsistent with Pages statements, are so opposed to the circumstances attending the business transaction, and are improbable especially The report next considers the specific and single charge of bribery preferred by A. M. York, whose statement is that Pomeroy gave him on Monday, January 28th, $2,000, and on Tuesday, January 29th, $5,000, as a bribe to vote for him in joint session on Wednesday. Pomeroy's statement is that he gave York the money at the time and the amounts stated, not as a bribe, but to carry to Mr. Page as a loan from Pomeroy to aid in the purchase of thirty bonds of the United States of the denomination of $1,000, Page having $25,000 in currency. The Committee say the question for them to determine was, not which of either of these two statements are plainly irreconsilable as is in all its details true, but whether taking all testimony together and weighing it, York has sustained his charge. The Committee then quote from testimony including that of York, to show that these are circumstances that legitimately effect the n view of the circumstances attending roy gave him on Monday, January 28th the Senatorial election, no reliance can be placed upon them perceiving no good result from an elaborate statement. Were there time for the Senate to consider the subject I should feel it my duty to give at large my reasons for my convictions. But this is the last day of the session and of Pomercy's Senatorial term, and before the reports can be printed, much less con-sidered, the session will be at an end. 1 herefore say no more than to report the onclusions to which my saind has reluctantly and painfully been brought. Senator Vickers says, considering the nature and character of the testimony for the prosecution and defence, with all its surrounding circumstances, I have not been able to conclude, beyond a reasona-ble doubt, that the charges against Pome-

They put the money in the treasury of the United States and invest it so that it will be drawing interest until the proper distribution can be made.

Mr. Trumbuil—That is a very fortunate thing for the United States, but rather an unfortunate thing for those who lost their vessels and their goods.

Mr. Edmunds said the money would not be due until the 12th of September, and as Congress met in December the parties would have to wait but three months. The report was then concurred in.

The deficiency bill was then passed.
On motion of Mr. Edmunds the Secretary was directed to sotify the House that free and deliberate choice of a Senator The avenues are crowded with strang-ers. Pennsylvania avenue, along which the grand inaugural parade will move, is already decorated along its entire length Numerous military organizations are al-ready represented, the West Point cadets being conspicuous. The Executive man-sion and public departments are thronged by strangers, and a general holiday ap-arance is presented. At a session of the Union League of America this afternoon resolutions of re-spect to the memory of the late Governor Geary and in favor of civil and public rights were adopted. It was decided to keep up the organization and render it efficient in the luture. The League ad-journed to meet in April at Philadelphia when officers will be elected.

Advices from Rushville, Indiana, reparding the murder of John Hatfield on the Miami Railroad, four miles south of that place last Friday night, say the deceased was thirty years old, a farm laborer, and was in the habit of carrying all his money in his pocket. He was at a spelling school Friday night, and left there and went to the Widow Anderson's. He traded coats with her son, when both set out on the road together. Three bullets were found in the head of the deceased and the coat which he got from Anderson was found by the roadside half a mile from the place of the murder covered with blood. Anderson has been arrested and blood found on his clothing. He had bought a revolver of the deceas day or two before the murder. volver and the money, about $200, which the deceased had at the time of the mur-
